It is useless to phone the office and ask whom the party is that is advertising under (blank) address. The advertisement is given to you in confidence and that confidence is not broken.

Among the castle's treasures are a number of beautiful tapestries which tell the history of England in heraldic terms. These tapestries, according to Captain W. A. Craig, of the Lincolnshire Archaeological society, have been sold to American millionaires and will be removed to New York and Chicago to be set up in the fifth avenue and Michigan avenue homes of "vulgar rich." Other treasures, historically priceless, are to be sold to the highest bidder. NEW RULINGS MADE BY INVESTIGATORS

SENATE COMMITTEE EXPLAINS TO WITNESSES WHAT THEY DESIRE TO FIND OUT.

EDMONDS ON STAND

No Facts Means That Money was Spent Contrary to Law is the Opinion of Senate.

(By Associated Press.) Milwaukee, Oct. 5.—When campaign manager Edmonds again today in the Stephenson investigation, reiterated inability to give details of just what certain amounts of money were paid to individuals, was actually used for, Chairman Heyburn announced a ruling which, it is expected, will have important bearing on the conduct of the investigation.

Chairman Heyburn said: "If you were custodian of the Stephenson funds and had charge of their disbursement, it seems you are the person who is responsible under the law for keeping an account. We wish while you are giving such testimony, to call your attention to the way in which the United States Senate will look upon it."

"The rule is that where charges are officially made and no record can be given of the funds admittedly spent, the presumption is that they were wrongfully used and the burden of the proof is on the person against whom the charges were preferred."

Senator Heyburn's statement came in response to an inquiry from Littlefield, counsel for Stephenson, who wanted to know whether the campaign manager could be held guilty if he be unable to say in detail what was done with the money given to others for campaign purposes.

Referring to previous investigations by the Wisconsin legislature into charges of bribery in the Stephenson election, Edmonds said they were conducted for political effect.

WONDERFUL TALK AT BAPTIST SESSIONS

DEAN SHAILER MATTHEWS OF CHICAGO DELIVERS ADDRESS.

"SALVATION GOSPEL"

Head of Chicago University Theological School Stirs His Hearers Last Evening.

Dean Shailer Matthews of the Chicago University Theological Seminary delivered one of the most addresses of the convention in the auditorium of the Baptist church, last evening on the subject "The Sufficiency of the Gospel for the Salvation of Society."

Dean Matthews said in part: "There is a class of people now days who believe that the greater part arouse in a man the sense of sin affects his efficiency to a large degree. A sense of moral responsibility unfilled is widespread and growing rapidly. Sin is no longer abstract but personal. The great question is how to prevent sin, not to correct it. More and more is the necessity of sacrifice to the living of the Gospel being realized.

"Lastly and by far the greatest encouragement to the Christian Church is the fact that God is with them in all their efforts. The Gospel does not call people to do things for God but it holds promises from God of divine help in what we do try to accomplish.

COMMUNISM CAUSES MUCH DISTURBANCE

Restaurant in Turin Breaks up Owto Row with Waiters.

Turin, Oct. 5.—The waiters at the cooperative restaurant at the exhibition here are on a strike and the anti-socialist newspapers here are seriously arguing that the dispute proves the impracticability of the doctrine of communism. For the restaurant is managed by a Socialist society, a cooperative alliance.

The immediate cause of the strike was the discharge of a waiter who went to the manager to expound the grievances of himself and his fellows. The manager called in the police who threw the waiter's representative out of the place.

Now the waiters, forty in all, are picketing the restaurant to prevent the employment of "blacklegs," holding meetings and expounding on "solidarity," and writing delightfully forcible letters to the newspapers protesting against the employment of force "for the protection of the capitalist interests of the Socialists of the alliance," and "against the Outrage" on the right to organize and strike.

In the meantime the cooperative scheme is working nicely; only the alliance is co-operating with its customers now instead of with the waiters. Each customer is given a voucher which is exchanged at the kitchen for food.

of the present population of the globe are absolutely and irrevocably doomed. No hope may ever be entertained for their salvation by any possible means.

"Another class lost its confidence in the ability of the Church of today to bring about the salvation of human beings, or even to aid in any great matter that end.

"But what of the class in between these two, and by far the larger class, which is not being affected by religion in any degree whatsoever? That is the great question. Not the people who are dissatisfied with any of the existing forms of religion or worship but the people who have no thought of religion at all, create the great problem for the Christians of this age. It is only when these are brought into the right attitude toward God that His Kingdom can come to this earth.

"In consideration of this problem the question arises, What is the efficiency of the Christian religion as an agent of salvation? A man never accomplishes more than his enthusiasm amounts to. Accomplishments never arise above or amount to more than a man's faith in his ability. God doesn't mean any more to a person than that person asks of Him and has faith that he will receive.

"The salvation of society means the transformation of the actual forces in operation among the human beings of the present day. How many people regard the Church as an institution of the character of the Red Cross Society—for the redemption of people after they have been hurt by years of sin rather than for the purpose of preventing these same people from sinning in the first place. Our Christianity should be used to save before rather than to help after.

"This salvation should not be accomplished by force but by the love and Christian spirit displayed by the Christian. It is far better to win a person's regard by sacrificing than by fighting with him. The teaching of Jesus by mouth and by action, in the very heart of the Gospel. The social upbraidings of different classes are not Christian because by them people are trying to gain what they consider their right and do not consider the rights of others at all. They are purely selfish. To keep from doing things which may seem to be our rights although they interfere with the comfort of some one else is one of the greatest trials in the Christian life.

"Just for comfort, the overpowering desire to do nothing but what may add to our personal comfort in some way covers most of the evils of this day great and small. The heroism of the soldier who leads the charge when men filled with the animal instinct for killing his fellow men and with the excitement created by hundreds of men rushing forward, all with the purpose to kill, is nothing compared to the heroism of the man who is a Christian always during the routine of life.

"Men cannot be truly religious and be comfortable at the same time.

"True Christianity carries a cross with it and the person who is thinking of his own comfort is not capable of receiving the good things of life. Christ fed the five thousand—and then sent them away preferring the twelve who did not follow Him for the sake of a free lunch.

"We cannot live the Gospel and live it for the salvation of society without sacrificing our personal comfort in the process.

"In short, the Gospel is insufficient for salvation while the church people have the lust for comfort. Let us turn and look at the other side of the question from the question. The Church is being aroused to the real object of religion and is daily becoming awake to its responsibility. It is becoming aware of the fact that it must save and not merely rescue. The great obligation is being realized more every day and a transformation is taking place in Churches now.

"Again, the Gospel's capacity to repast was served by the ladies of the church and hearty cheers for the alma mater of the guests, and members of the company. In the capacity of constabular, Rev. J. C. Hazen created a great deal of amusement at expense of the speakers of the evening.

Rev. Chandler of Beaver Dam was chosen as chairman of the committee to make arrangements for the next annual banquet and then the toastmaster called upon Dr. Benton who was a guest of the evening. Dr. Green of the University was next called upon and he was followed by a short speech from J. S. Dickerson of Chicago. Dean Shailer Matthews gave the closing speech of the banquet about the work which the divinity school in Chicago was trying to do this year and the ideals which they had.

Throughout the hour the anecdotes and jokes of the speakers and audience kept the entire company in a very enjoyable mood and it was voted by all present to have been one of the best banquets which it had been their privilege to attend.

One of the features of last evening's sessions of the convention was the four infinite addresses given by representatives of the nations. The speakers were as follows:

L. J. Olson, Swedish church; N. K. Larsen, Superintendent of the Dan-Norwegian church; C. B. Sterick, Polish; P. W. Meyers, German; J. Murphy, Irish; Rev. J. Bladen, W. H. Jones, Welsh; W. T. Dorward, Scotch; and Rev. Yards, American.

Following a solo by Mrs. Parks, Dean Matthews gave the address of the evening, and the session adjourned for the night.

SPOKE OF MEMORIAL AT VICKSBURG, MISS.

H. W. Rood, Instructor in Patriotism of Wisconsin G. A. R. in Address— to High School Students.

H. W. Rood, instructor in patriotism for the Wisconsin G. A. R., gave a very interesting address to the students of the high school this morning on the topic, "The Wisconsin Memorial at Vicksburg." He described very carefully the National Park at Vicksburg which is located on the ground where the Union and Confederate armies were entrenched.

Each state in the Union has erected a monument in this park marking the place where their regiments fought during the long siege. The speaker told briefly of Wisconsin's representation at the memorable attack, stating that there were seventeen organizations from this state including eleven regiments, four batteries, and two battalions of cavalry.

He described the Wisconsin monument which cost $100,000, and which was recently erected. The shaft rises two hundred feet in height and is constructed of Monticello granite. Around the base are the names of every Wisconsin soldier in the siege engraved on bronze tablets.

Mr. Rood also told of the national cemetery in the northern part of the park which is of superior beauty. There are 1,522 men buried in this place.

BUYING CONTINUES
IN LIMITED DEGREE

Local Dealers are Purchasing an Occasional 1911 Tobacco Crop, Which is now Nearly Cured.

Local tobacco dealers continue to purchase the 1911 tobacco crops slowly, by and without the feverishness which was manifested earlier in the season, indicating that the demand is steady and normal. The prices paid are about the same as at the beginning of the season, ranging around ten and twelve cents for the best of the offerings.

There are a large number of crops in this section which are not contracted for and many of the growers who have not at all been approached. It will be the rule among the buyers to wait until the crop is taken down and stripping has commenced, before the largest part of the remaining leaf is purchased. It is not thought, however, that the prices will be much changed with this wait as the probability of shed damage are at a minimum except for the latest crops.

Satisfaction is general at the curing this season, especially for that tobacco which was in the shed by the middle of September. The color is all that could be desired. Growers this year have been favored by weather conditions in that the season was perhaps the longest in the history of the tobacco culture in this state. This allowed a complete ripening before harvest, which is a decided improvement over previous seasons.

Evansville, Oct. 4.—All ways will lead to the Y. M. C. A. social which will be given this evening in the asone is invited. The directors of the Y are anxious that there shall be a order to demonstrate the work which is being done for the boys in the city.

Director Atkinson has arranged a good program for the evening at

The Preacher Knew.
When volunteer prayers were called for a man struck in and prayed very earnestly for his poor land, and asked the Lord to give him a good crop.

"What that land of yours needs, brother, is not prayer, but manure," said the preacher, "as he gave out,
"Work, for the Night is Coming."

FORMER JANESVILLE GIRL WEDS AT JUDA

Miss Florence Bagley and Frank Miller Were Married
Yesterday.

Juda, Wis., Oct. 4.—This afternoon at one o'clock the marriage of Miss Florence Bagley, formerly of Janesville, to Mr. Frank Miller, of Juda, was solemnized in the presence of their relatives and friends. The parlor was decorated in autumn leaves, forms and dark red dahlias. While Mrs. Northern played the wedding march, the bride, accompanied by Miss Grace Miller and Mr. Black-ford, passed down the stairs and into the room where under an arch of flowers and foliage they were made man and wife. Rev. Lewis of Juda performed the ceremony.

After the congratulations the party passed into the dining room where roses, ferns and amaranth had been used to carry out the effect in pink, green and white. A delicious three-course dinner, which had been prepared under the direction of Mrs. Rutter of Janesville, was then served by three friends of the bride, Miss Ina Christ,
Miss Gladys Rutter and Miss Nellie Boherty.

The guests from out of town were:
Mrs. Bronson, Miss Anna Lou Bronson, Mr. Lylo Bronson and Mr. Earl Bronson of Elkhorn, Mr. Allen Bronson of Whitewater, Mr. A. Carlin and daughter, Louise, of Palmyra, Mrs.

water, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Hall, Mrs.
W. J. Hall, Mr. and Mrs. Donno and Mrs. Blay of Janesville, Mr. and Mrs.

Brookland.

The bride and groom will live in Juda where they will be at home to their friends after November 1st.

London's Italian Colony.
The Italians in London, England, are sufficient of themselves to form a large town. There are as many as 14,000, about 2,000 of whom are ice-cream vendors and 1,000 organ-grinders. The other 11,000 are chiefly engaged as plaster bust sellers, artists, models, cooks, valets, teachers, artists, restaurant and hotel keepers, and so on.

enough money to go some.

JURY FINDS WOMAN IN HER SANE MIND

Mrs. Ida Knoll of Edgerton Had Jury Examination For Sanity in County Court Today.

Mrs. Ma Knoll of Edgerton, who was given a jury examination in the county court this morning to determine her sanity, was found to be of sane mind. The jury came to this decision after a conference of less than five minutes.

Complaint was entered by neighbors of the woman in Edgerton who had declared that her actions were indicative of insanity, as she had repeatedly charged them with stealing articles which had belonged to her.
The complaint was signed by these neighbors, none of whom appeared in the court.

Mrs. Knoll had previously lived in the town of Albion and after the death of her husband who was killed in falling from a train in Edgerton over two years ago, she had lived with neighbors in that township. She alleged these people, however, to be disreputable toward her regarding the disposal of farm machinery which constituted the sole property of her husband.
About two years ago she moved to Edgerton and supported herself and four small children by washing, sewing and performing other domestic duties. During this time she had had trouble with a number of her neighbors as she alleged they had taken various articles, including linen, silverware and chickens. They in turn had accused her of misconduct.

The jury found that the facts in the case did not warrant a verdict of insanity and they declared her sane.
The jury was composed of the following: John Jones, W. Hall, Horatio Nelson, Wallace Cochran, Norman
Parker and Wm. Zull.

Would Change Sleeping Position.
A French doctor, M. V. Fischer, advocates a complete reversal of the present method of making up beds.
You must have your head on a level with, or lower, than your feet. If pillows are to be used they must be under the feet instead of the head. The result, he claims, will be amazing, being a sure cure for insomnia as well as a preventive of nightmare.

Obvious.
The man who gets much satisfaction out of the fact that he has a high, aristocratic instep never worries about

WOMAN'S PAGE

HEART AND HOME TALKS

BY BARBARA ROYD

How Two Women Earned a Living When Misfortune Came.

IN a little New England town, a woman is running a restaurant that is famous throughout the town for its cookery.

In a New York town, another woman is doing precisely the same thing, and so famous is her ten-room that people come from adjoining towns for the delicious little teas and luncheons and dinners she serves.

Both these women unexpectedly met with reverses. And to earn a living they turned to the one thing they knew how to do well—cook. And they are doing this one thing so well, they are making a comfortable living, have made a good business reputation, and are happy in their work. And they conduct their enterprises in such a dignified, business-like way, that not only are their townpeople proud of them, but the passing tourist goes on his way filled with respect for the good sense and ability they display.

If you enter this little New England town and inquire for a restaurant, as a party of motorists did, for there seemed to be no hotel, you are told with pride of this place, and your informant lays stress upon the cookery. If you miss it and inquire again at the far end of the town for some place to get a meal, once more you are told of this restaurant, and with particular unctious your informant says, "She is a good cook," as if in memory tasting her viands. Your appetite is whetted, and you determine to find the place, which finally you do. It is unpretentious. And in the kitchen, presides the mistress of the establishment, a capable, overworked New England woman of about sixty. She does the cooking herself, and everything is as the townspeople said, delicious. When you have finished, she steps to the door to receive payment. There is no particular style about the place, but there is good food. And the world wants good food.

The other woman has opened her home for her business, a lovely place filled with beautiful old furniture. She serves you a luncheon on a fine old mahogany table, and her china is exquisite. But the same capability is there. She looks after the cooking and she waits upon you herself, though you catch a glimpse of a little maid, as the mistress passes back and forth from the kitchen. She is a tall, white-haired woman, and as she serves you she chatters, and from her talk as well as from her home, you know she is travelled and cultured.

But there is no apology for her work, no whining about hard luck; but instead a gracious dignity and a thoroughgoingness that make you respect every inch of her.

Many women like these two are suddenly brought face to face with poverty and the necessity of earning a living. They will be wise, if like these women, they do what they know how to do well. These women cook, and they know the world needed food. And so they are serving food, just as good as they know how to make it; and the world is making a pathway to their door, as some philosopher has said the world always will, if you have something the world wants.

This white-haired woman said, when drawn out, that when she was wondering what to do, a friend had said, "You make the most delicious bread I have ever eaten. Why not make bread?" "And I did, and that is how I got started," she concluded.

And no matter what may be your gift, whether it is cooking or sewing or gardening or what not, do not think you will lose the respect of those whose respect is worth having by taking up this work when misfortune makes it necessary. The one who does his work thoroughly and with dignity always has the respect of right-minded people. And the world takes off its hat to those who serve it satisfactorily.

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

UNDoubtedly, she has some strange notion that she is showing her superiority.

That is the only way I can account for her. I mean the woman who is always finding fault with public servants.

She complains of the telephone operator. She is perpetually running up against rude conductors, and lodging complaints against them.

When she dines in public, she makes it a point to announce in tones that can be heard half way across the room that she never saw such "perfectly wretched service."

It is she who telephones to the postoffice to complain that the postman lingers at people's doors too much, and her mail is delayed.

It is she who complains to headquarters that the poor shop girl who had lifted down twenty-five heavy boxes of lace that she might "look them over," was rude to her.

And instead of being ashamed of her complaints, she appears to be proud of them.

She tells about them with a haughty air which seems to say, "This is what happens to anyone who does not yield me the perfect obedience to which I am accustomed."

If one does not know her, one gets the idea that she is a woman of power and position, accustomed to being waited on within an inch of her life.

But, whisper, while I tell you a secret. Nine times out of ten it is just the other way around. She abuses "the little brief authority," belonging to her by virtue of her position as one of the public, which those folks are bound over to serve uncomplainingly, because she is not used to power.

If she were really a woman of position the mistress's inability to command good service, as the waitress's failure to give it.

If she were really a woman of position she would long ago have learned the forbearance, the tolerance, the gentleness that comes to all really worthwhile people, who deal much with their inferiors.

And it's the same way, I think, with people who are always complaining of food, conditions or accommodations when traveling. They want to impress upon you that they are accustomed to luxury, but nine times out of ten, what they are getting is really superior to what they are used to.

I remember a girl at college, who was always complaining of what seemed to the rest of us, very decent fare. We fancied she must have been used to a very elaborate cuisine at home. We found out later that quite the opposite was true, and that our table at college must have seemed luxurious compared to that to which she was accustomed.

The person who has been accustomed to real luxury usually also has enough real refinement not to attempt to tell about it in this way.

The men or women who try to show their power or superiority by abuse and complaints, would only be amplying if they were not so disgusting, and did not sometimes cause so much unhappiness and trouble.

The Kitchen Cabinet

OF THIS is prime, chestnut time.

This comes at best, and so, while fields are white with gleaming time.

Into the fields I go, A basket on my arm to bear

The treasures that I gain, Oh, who would have the thoughts of care

And who deem life in vain, While merrily the crickets call, And cheerily the chestnuts fall.

THE OCTOBER NUT.

The chestnut, though not grown in all parts of the United States, is found in almost every ordinary market. Chestnuts are palatable in almost any form and may be served in soup, as an entree or confection.

The shells are removed by cutting a half-inch gash in the side of the shell; then put them into a pan with a bit of butter, a half teaspoonful of each cup of nuts. Shake over the fire until the butter is melted, then put into the oven for five minutes. With a sharp knife remove the shells and the inner brown skin will come off at the same time.

Chestnut Soup.—Cook two cups of shelled and blanched chestnuts in boiling water until tender; press through a sieve and add two cups of scalded milk. Cook two tablespoonfuls of butter for five minutes, add two tablespoonfuls of flour and when well blended add the chestnut mixture, salt and cayenne to taste. Cook five minutes and add a cup of cream; reheat and serve.

Chestnuts en Casserole.—Remove the shells from three cups of chestnuts, put into the casserole and pour over three cups of highly-seasoned chicken stock. Cover and cook slowly three hours, then add two tablespoonfuls of butter and one of flour cooked together before adding. Serve at the table from the casserole.

Chestnut Souffles.—Take a cup of chestnut purée prepared as for soup, add a few drops of onion juice, two well-beaten eggs, two tablespoonfuls of butter, the same of thick cream, salt and paprika. Shape in balls the size of the French chestnuts; roll in crumbs and egg and fry in deep fat.

WISCONSIN WOMEN IN THE CIVIL WAR

New Book Issued Today by State History Commission Treats of Heroism of Wisconsin Women in 1861.

(Special to the Gazette)

Madison, Wis., Oct. 5.—"Wisconsin Women in the War of 1861" is the title of a book issued today by the Wisconsin History Commission, in which a high tribute is paid to the women who made sacrifices at home and at the front during the great conflict between north and south. The volume was written by Miss Ethel Alice Hurn of Oshkosh, Wis., a recent graduate of the University of Wisconsin.

The Wisconsin History Commission was created and financed by the 1907 legislature. Its object was the publication of accessible data bearing on Wisconsin's part in the civil war. The first volume of the series was written by the late Col. William F. Vilas and named a few days prior to his death. It was entitled "The Vicksburg Campaign."

Practically every hamlet in Wisconsin has a hero in the volume written by Miss Hurn. The frontispiece is a portrait of Cordelia A. Harvey, widow of Gov. L. P. Harvey. Mrs. Harvey founded the Soldiers' Orphan hospital in Madison and raised funds for soldiers' relief at the front.

Narrations of the services of a number of women are included in this volume, of which the following are important: Mrs. W. P. Lyon, wife of the late Chief Justice Lyon; Mrs. Henrietta Col. Milwaukee; Mrs. Susan Van Valkenburg, Oshkosh; Miss Katherine Haseel, Delavan; Mrs. Anne Johnson, Chesham; Miss Lottie Holey, Milwaukee; Mrs. William Jackson, Milwaukee; Mrs. Mary A. Bickorlyke, Milwaukee; and Mrs. W. E. Wording of Racine.

"Women likewise were found at the front as nurses, hospital matrons, sanitary agents, Christian Commission workers, and occasionally as 'daughters of the regiment' or as officers' wives," says Dr. Rouben G. Thwaites in the preface to Miss Hurn's book. "But the heaviest burden undoubtedly was carried by those who remained at home. In addition to their much needed work of relief, many labored steadily on farms and in shops as breadwinners for their families, while the men were serving in the ranks. The extent of their cooperation in this direction can never definitely be ascertained. With a tireless and courageous energy worthy of Spartan mothers, they kept the wheels of industry in motion, and thus saved the country from economic ruin. It is probable that future historians of the war may consider this the most important contribution of northern women to the cause of the union."

UP-TO-DATE HOUSEKEEPING

Making and Bottling Grape Juice for Invalid or Guest

By Alice E. Whitaker

When like the old colored mammy, offering her little stock at the market, you can say, "I've got fox grapes and I've got garden grapes," use the wild grapes for preserves and jellies and the cultivated sort for bottled grapejuices. The uses of the wild grape makes an interesting story but today it is the much praised grape juice that is to be considered.

Of course the forehand housewife has already put up a supply of other kinds of bottled fruit juices that need no label to guarantee their purity. These include currant juice, a combination of currant and raspberry juices, old-fashioned raspberry vinegar and also strawberry juice to which she will add fresh lemon juice when used. It is not too late to bottle the chief of all fruits juices which comes from the Concord, Isabella and Catawba grapes. The Concord grape is considered the best of all three.

This unfermented juice is valuable in the sick room often as a substitute for wine, but always to satisfy the craving for something cooling yet not so acid as lemon juice which is not always liked or allowed. Grape juice is also an invaluable ingredient of fruit punches.

The juice will not be much finer if the grapes are not over ripe. If they cannot be secured at their best stage, let them be a trifle under ripe rather than have gone beyond mere ripeness. Wash and pick the stems from six quarts of wild grapes and put in a preserving kettle with one quart of cold water. Any measure may be used if the proportion of one part water to six parts of grapes be retained.

Heat slowly until the boiling point is reached and the grapes are softened, turn into double cheese cloth bag and strain without pressing the pulp through. Bring the juice again slowly to boiling, then seal in bottles at once.

Another way to prepare grape juice is to pick Concord grapes from the stems, add one pint of water to each quart of grapes, heat slowly and cook until all are soft. It is safer to use an asbestos mat under the kettle than to risk scorching. Lay a cheese cloth in a colander, turn in the hot grapes and without pressing, strain through the cloth. Put the juice back in the kettle, add one cup of sugar to each four cups of juice. Heat, skim and bottle after boiling a few minutes.

When a small amount of grape juice is needed for the sick room or a febrile, put three cups of grapes picked from the stems into a double boiler with two cups of cold water. Cook one and one-half to two hours, strain and cook ten minutes. Cool before using. Add loaf sugar to taste when serving.

By using the double boiler as when cooked directly over the heat, and the result is a clearer juice. A convenient way to prepare the grapes is to add the prescribed amount of water, using hot instead of cold, then set into a fireless cooker and let stand several hours or over night. It will take some time to reheat the juice and make the grapes tender enough to break by their own weight when turned into the draining bag. But the juice will be of a finer quality than when allowed to boil and break as they cook.

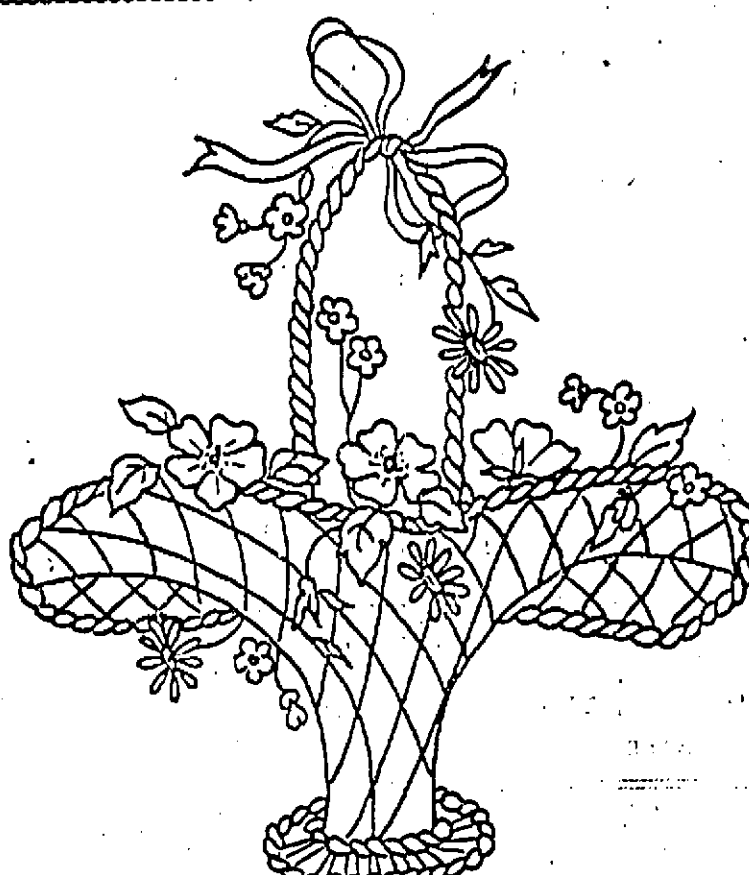

To prepare the bottles put them into cold water, bring it to the boiling point, then boil five minutes. Then cork into the water at the same time. Fill the bottles to overflowing, press the corks in and dip into melted paraffine and set away in a cool dark place. Be careful not to add too much sugar to grape juice lest it turn to jelly.

When the grapes are to be saved and the housewife is too busy to make jelly, she can seal the uncooked juice in fruit jars. At a more convenient time this juice can be made into jelly and stored in glasses.

THE ROMAN TOQUE.

One of the great annoyances of lady theatre-goers these days is the rigid enforcement—even in moving picture houses—of the rule to remove all headgear, as hats of recent date will not come off without ruining the hair-dressing. Here is an ideal theatre hat—a soft crown of velvet, which with a band of lace or jeweled ornaments, can be trimmed and retrimmed to suit the costume.

MOTIFS FOR SACHETS, PINCUSHION COVERS OR UNDERWEAR.

This dainty little basket would be most suitable for sachets, pincushion covers or on lingerie underwear. The ribbons, leaves and flowers are worked solid, and the basket is done in the outline stitch. Mercerized cotton, No. 35, or flax-floss should be used.

Faith in Immortality. The faith in immortal life is the great achievement of the human mind. The destruction of this great poetic conception would be like depriving the planet of an atmosphere.—Pinto.

Avoid Haste in Criticism.

Except in cases of necessity, which are rare, leave your friend to learn unpleasant truths from his enemies; they are ready enough to tell them.—O. W. Holmes.

Stops a Deep-Seated Cough in a Hurry

A Family Supply of Unequaled Cough Remedy for 50c—Money Refunded if It Fails.

Cough medicines, as a rule, contain a large proportion of plain syrup—a good ingredient, but one that anyone can make. A pint of granulated sugar, with 1/2 pint of warm water, stirred for 3 minutes, gives you as good syrup as money can buy.

A 50-cent bottle of Pinx, mixed in a pint bottle with home-made sugar syrup, gives you a full pint of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-mixed for $2.50. There is a clear saving of $2.00. Full directions in package.

And money couldn't buy a quicker, better remedy. Take hold at once, gives almost instant relief, and actually stops the most obstinate, deep-seated cough in 24 hours. It stimulates the appetite, is slightly laxative and has a pleasant taste—children take it willingly. Splendid for hoarseness, asthma, chest pain, and other throat troubles, and is required for prompt results in whooping cough.

Pinx is a special and highly concentrated compound of imported Norway White Pine extract, and is rich in pineol and other natural healing pine elements. Simply mix it as directed with sugar syrup or strained honey, and it is ready for use.

Used in more homes in the U. S. and Canada than any other cough remedy. Pinx has often been imitated, but never successfully, for nothing else will produce the same results. The genuine is guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. Certificates of guarantee are wrapped in each package. Your druggist has Pinx or will order it for you. If not, send to The Pinx Co., Fort Wayne, Ind.

CONFIDENCE

We Back up Our Statements With Our Personal Reputation and Money

We are so positive that we can relieve constipation, no matter how chronic it may be, that we offer to furnish the medicine free of all cost if we fail.

We think that it is worse than useless to attempt to cure constipation with cathartics. Cathartics may do much harm. They may cause a reaction, irritate and weaken the bowels, and make constipation more chronic.

Constipation is often accompanied and may be caused by weakness of the nerves and muscles of the large intestine or colon. To expect a cure you must therefore tone up and strengthen those parts and restore them to healthier activity.

The discovery of the active principle of our remedy involved the labor of skillful research chemists. This remedy produces results such as are expected from the best of the best-known intestinal tonics, and is particularly prompt in its results.

We want you to try Rexall Orderlies on our guarantee. They are exceedingly pleasant to take and are ideal for children. They apparently act directly on the nerves and muscles of the bowels, having it would seem, a neutral action on other organs or glands. They do not purge or cause inconvenience. If they do not positively cure chronic or habitual constipation and thus relieve the myriads of associate or dependent chronic ailments, your money will be refunded.

Try Rexall Orderlies at our risk. Three sizes of packages, 10c, 25c, and 50c. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies in this community only at our store—The Rexall Store, Health Drug Co., 14 West Milwaukee St., Janesville Wis.

TEACHING A CHILD TO READ.

CHILDREN may be taught to read at home with very little effort. Mothers hesitate because they fear they are not up to date in method.

Once I asked a young girl who had only been over from Norway a year, and a half, who had lived most of that time in a Norwegian family, how it happened she could read the recipes in the cook book. Search all the works on education and you cannot find a better lesson of how to teach reading, than her reply: "My cousin always read aloud what the papers said about the people we knew. I listened and when I found time I read it over and over until I knew the words."

That is all there is of learning to read. The child learns the spoken word by hearing it over and over, and he learns the written word by seeing it over and over. The words should be within his easy understanding, they should interest him, and that is about all the help you can give. He must do the rest himself.

Learning to read is at best rather a slow process involving much repetition. The ease with which children read what is familiar during the first year of school is somewhat deceptive. The average child does not really master reading until ten or twelve, probably because his understanding is not developed to grasp a wide range of thought before that age, even though he is able to pronounce the words. It is unwise to encourage a child to read what is beyond his comprehension as it is to encourage him to talk about what he does not understand.

THOSE WOMEN.

The chief was cross that morning and was venting his wrath on the pretty young lady who manipulated the typewriter.

"Everything is in confusion on my desk," he said, testily. "It always is."

"You insist that you don't want anything disturbed there," she responded, meekly.

"Well, I don't wish my papers disturbed, but I don't want this sheet of postage stamps left there."

"Where shall I put them," she inquired, demurely, as she took them up.

"Don't ask too many questions," he snapped. "Put them anywhere out of sight."

"Very well, sir," she cooed, as softly as a dove.

And, licking them with her pretty red tongue, she stuck the sheet on his bald head and walked out to seek a new situation.

His Impediment.

"Boss, would you help a poor gent what ain't able to work?"

"Why, you look strong. What keeps you from working?"

"Me blooming pride, gent."

A Good Riddance.

He rocked the boat And quickly drained; Our grief, you'll note, Is not profound.

A Cure.

I knew a and somnambulist, A victim of despair, Until he wandered into church And slept an hour there.

FORTY YEARS AGO

From the Janesville Gazette, October 5, 1871.

Green Bay, October, 4.—Seven counties in this section are in flames, and the property owners are fighting to save their property by digging and blowing trenches to withhold the progress of the flames. Between the towns of Appleton and De Pere on the Northwestern railway the forests are a seething mass of flames. The counties of Deer, Kewaunee, Brown, Manitowish, Outagamie, Shawano and Oconto are being devastated.

Thunder and lightning formed part of this afternoon storm.

The common council has taken time by the forelock in authorizing the city engineer to look up a route for the Janesville and Evansville road by which its rolling stock can obtain ingress to and across from the city.

The way will soon be open. Bring on your iron horse.

The gathering of temperance delegates in our city yesterday, or some other cause has had the effect of bringing water from the clouds to the great relief of this portion of the earth.

There are fears of an other overflow at New Orleans. A strong north-east wind for several days past has filled the lake from the Gulf. A north-east storm, with rain, commenced on the night of the 2 inst. The water is over the Mobile Railway at three different points between this city and Nigelette.

Work on the Princeton extension of the Sheboygan and Fond du Lac railroad is being pushed forward with remarkable rapidity.

Eggs With Three Yolks.

Eggs with two yolks occur not uncommonly, but eggs with three yolks are exceptionally rare. Such an egg was recently laid by a barred Plymouth rock pullet at the Maine experiment station, and is described in some detail in a bulletin recently issued. The egg was somewhat above the average size, but no other abnormal features were noticeable.

FOR RENT—Dr

"THE GIRL I LOVE."
Manager Harry Askin of the latest and merriest LaSalle Opera House success, "The Girl I Love" which comes to the Myers Theatre Wednesday night, Oct. 13, is a firm believer in the efficacy of atmospheric and realistically effective scenery as an adjunct to musical comedies. By the time most managers have O. K.'d the heavy bills entailed for properly costuming a modern musical play, he is apt to skip, as regards the scenery proper, and that is why theatregoers are so woefully accustomed to a stage that looks enchanting enough when filled with gaily bedecked chor-

TWO OF THE APPLE GIRLS IN "THE GIRL I LOVE," MYERS THEATRE, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 11.

isters, but barren, and frequently shoddy, when only two or three principals are on the stage. Mr. Askin, however, thinks it is not only inartistic to accompany gorgeous sets of costumes—costing many thousands of dollars with make-shift, second hand scenery, but poor business policy as well, for such a condition is certain to detract from the effectiveness of the gowns themselves. So he always insists upon the scenic artist providing his productions with a scenic equipment that even David Belasco—the past master in the art of harmonious and luxurious stage settings—could pick no quibble with, although it may be that flocks of pretty girls are hiding much of the scenery from the audience three-fourths of the time. Never in his career has Mr. Askin been more lavish in the matter of scenery than in "The Girl I Love." The first act discloses a section of a model farm high up among the towering Catskills. In the foreground, a picturesque house over-run with clambering roses while the porch is interior of the living room of this same farm-house a long, big-headed room, a huge grate made of rough gold stones filling one end, and throwing great dancing flame shadows into every corner of the place. Through the long row of windows in the back glimpses of the mountains can be had, while a profusion of tables, "comfy" chairs, sofa-pillows galore, and other fixings makes this a room that becomes the envy of every spectator. In one corner a broad staircase runs to the second story, where there is a long gallery, finished, as is the entire scene, in mellowed, weathered oak, with squared, open beams showing in the ceiling. Furthermore the entire stage is dressed for the festive ravellings of "Hallow'een," great streamers of autumn leaves, in all their array of color, gleaming, round gold Jack-O'-Lanterns, and shining ears of corn contributing to the beauty and enchantment of the setting.

It goes almost without saying that with such scenery, Mr. Askin has, of course, provided a rich and harmonious supply of costumes that more than do justice to the luxurious surroundings. In the famous "Hallow'een" number, which is like a pure torn from the merry annals of this implish, satirical legendry and corresponds more nearly to the English extravaganza-antoinette so popular in London than anything before seen in this country, costumes aggregating an outlay of more than $2,000 are worn by the chorus girls. During this number all the games and frolics sacred to "Hallow'een" are indulged in, to the unbounded glee of the little folks, while the mind of every grown-up, irresistibly sinking backward, years to the time when "Hallow'een" constituted the gala holiday of the year.

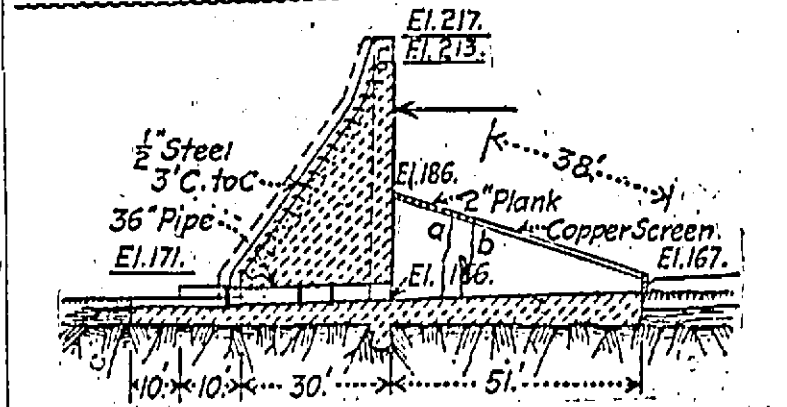

There are fourteen song hits in "The Girl I Love" and everyone of them is costumed not only with unrivalled lavishness, but with a keen insight for the harmonious in color schemes and groupings that set a new standard in the production of American musical comedies, and is only to be equalled in the world-famous holiday productions in London. In accordance with his invariable policy Mr. Askin is sending on tour the identical cast and production that ran for five months at the La Salle in Chicago last season, every single detail in the performance being identical with those given in the Windy City. It is this policy that is making the "Askin-LaSalle" trade-mark one to be conjured with through the land that has hitherto been smothered with third and fourth-rate imitations of Metropolitan productions.

"Busy Izzy."
The remarkable outpouring of musical comedy attractions, makes it a pretty safe proposition that this form of entertainment will survive indefinitely, and continue to charm, amuse and delight the average audience composed of theatre patrons, who believe in the playhouse as a place where to drive away dull care. In the gigantic preparations made this season on the question of supremacy seemed to be the most coveted; it was, who would get there with the largest and most superb productions, who would present the most novel and attractive features, and what aggregation would contain the greatest number of pretty girls. George Sidney, whose big laughing success, "Busy Izzy," which will pay a visit to the Myers theatre, Thursday night, Oct. 12, while taking into consideration the high importance of all these commendable essentials, was determined not to sacrifice the dramatic status of his attraction, by neglecting to supply a story of reasonable intelligence around which to shape the infusion of song and fun in a wholly consistent manner. How well this ideal is carried out in "Busy Izzy" is best told from the splendidly unanimous verdict accorded by the press everywhere. From such a source it is also learned that "Busy Izzy" is also handsomely blessed with pretty girls, who becomingly wear the exquisite gowns that were especially designed for this inviting and pleasing musical fun show.

Daily Thought.
For the best and sweetest is not a matter of circumstances; it is not even success and love. It is being in tune.—Anna Fuller.

To Freshen Gas Mantle.
Carbon deposits which blacken a gas mantle can be removed by burning a little common salt on the burner.

The Dayless dam at Austin, Pa., was constructed by engineer T. Chalkley Hutton. In view of the investigation now being made to place the responsibility for the horror the detail of construction becomes of especial interest. Many obstacles were met with in making a satisfactory foundation on which to erect the structure. The diagram shown herewith is a cross section of the Dam which has been pronounced the most scientifically built structure of its kind in the world.

Doctors' Prescription For Eczema

The most advanced physicians of this country and Europe are now prescribing a wash of wintergreen thymol and other soothing and healing ingredients for the cure of Eczema, Psoriasis and all other forms of skin trouble. This compound is known as the D. D. D. Prescription. Dr. Holmes, the well known skin specialist, writes: "I am convinced that the D. D. D. Prescription is as much a specific for Eczema as is quinine for a malarial. We have been prescribing the D. D. D. remedy for years." I my self vouch for the D. D. D. Prescription for Eczema and absolutely guarantee that it will take away the itch the instant you apply it.

ELECTRIC POWER FROM WIND

Economical Lighting Plants Can Be Based on It, With Gasoline Motors to Help.

There has never been a time when the forces of nature were subjected to such searching scrutiny to determine their availability for the development of mechanical power as they receive at present. This arises mainly from the progressive use of electricity.

Among other things it is believed that the wind can be utilized to a far greater extent than in the past, especially for electrical lighting. With this object in view the average state of the wind has been investigated in England. It is found that for approximately half the time the mean wind velocity is ten miles an hour, and for about one-third of the time fifteen miles. In the winter the average is higher. The great difficulty arises from the calm periods, which may last days, or even a week, but it has been shown that economical lighting plants can be based upon wind power by providing gasoline motors to take up the work whenever the wind falls.

The Nation of Hotel Keepers.
The "playground of Europe" is the very appropriate name bestowed upon Switzerland. In the summer time tourists come from all parts of the world and fill the hotels—the best organized and best kept of any in the world—for the Swiss are a nation of hotel keepers. The statement of the Chocolate Soldier, the hero of Bernard Shaw's "Arms and the Man," that his family has a home with three hundred rooms, fifty servants, twenty cows and so on, sounded like a bromidic tale until he explained that he was the son of a Swiss hotel keeper. Now the long and severe Swiss winter has been turned to advantage, and even when the great blue lakes are frozen and the snow mantles the lower hills, the tourist still raves over the varied beauties and grandeur of the Swiss scenery and the many delights of her mountain hostels.—Joe Mitchell Chapple in National Magazine.

A Patrop.
"Mr. Carriman is busy now," said the private secretary of the railroad president. "Is there anything I can do for you?" "O," replied the pompous visitor, "just a friendly call. I thought he'd like to know that I ride on his suburban branch now. I'm Colonel Nurlath."

System Full of Uric Acid—The Great Kidney Remedy Cured.

Two years ago I was very sick and after being treated by several of the best physicians in Clinton, I did not seem to get any better. I was confined to my bed. Seeing Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root advertised, I resolved to give it a trial. After using it for three weeks, I found I was gaining nicely, so I continued until I had taken a number of bottles. I am now restored to health and have continued my labors. My system was full of uric acid, but Swamp-Root cured me entirely. I am sixty years old.

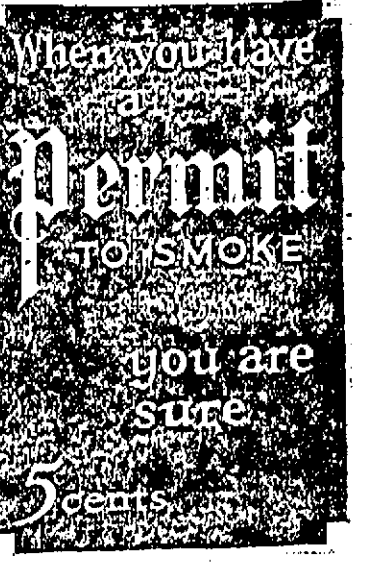

Yours very truly,

Buy a Farm in the Stanley Country—The Cream, Corn and Clover Country of Wisconsin

The country having Pure Water, Generous Rainfall, the Best Clay Loam Soil, Low Freight Rates, Schools, Churches, R. F. D. Routes, Neighbors, and where they never have a crop failure.

This section of Wisconsin has better railroad facilities than any other section of the State. All of our land is accessible to several railroads, all of which are competing lines to the large markets, which fact alone assures the farmers low freight rates, as well as fast freight service and a passenger service which is unequalled.

This section of Wisconsin leads the United States in Creameries and Cheese Factories per thousand inhabitants.

Here you have all the advantages of an old settled community, and pay for your land only $12.50 to $20.00 per acre. If you are looking to make an investment, it seems to us that you cannot find anything as well suited to your needs than in the STANLEY COUNTRY.

Blair sat at the door behind him, and began to realize how rude, how impudent his entrance would be considered. But he came boldly forward and would have introduced himself as "Dan Blair from Blaintown," but Miss Lane, who stood at the entrance through the smoke, burst into a laugh so bright, so delightful, that he was carried high up on the coral strands to the very beach. She crossed her white arms over her breast and leaned forward as a saleswoman might lean forward over a counter, and with her beautifully trained voice, all sweetly she asked him:

"Hello, little boy, what will you take?"

Blair giggled, quick to catch her meaning, and answered: "Oh, chocolate, I guess!"

And Letty Lane laughed, put out her white hand, the one without the cigarette, and said: "Haven't got that brand on board—no sorry! Will a cocktail do? All sorts in bottles. Higgins, fix Mr. Blair a Martini!"

As the dresser rose from her stooping position, the rest of Letty Lane's dressroom unfolded out of the inlet and smoke. On a sofa covered with lace pillows Blair saw a man sitting, smoking as well. He was tall, and had a dark mustache. It was Prince Pontotowsky, whom Dan had already met at the Gaiety shoot.

"Prince Pontotowsky," Miss Lane presented him. "Mr. Blair of Blaintown, Mont. Bay, Frederick, give me my cap, will you? It is over by your side. I've got to hustle."

The man, without moving, picked up a small red cap with a single plume, from the sofa at his side. In another second Letty Lane had placed it on her head of yellow hair, real yellow hair and not a doubt of it, like sunshine—not the color one gets from inside bottles. Her arms, her hands flashed with rings, priceless flashes, and the little spears pricked Dan like sharp needles.

"It's the nicest ever!" she was saying. "How on earth did you get in here, though? Have you bought the Gaiety theater? I'm the most exclusive girl on the stage. Who let you in?"

Her accent was English, and even that put her from him. As he looked at her he couldn't understand how he had ever recognized her. If he had waited for another act he wouldn't have believed the likeness real. The girl he remembered had both softened and hardened; the rounded features were gone, but all the angles were gone as well. Her eyes were as gray as the sea; she was painted and her lids were darkened. Soon close, she was not so divine as on the stage, but there was still a more thrilling charm about the fact that she was real.

"To think of any one from Blaintown being here tonight! Staying very long, Mr. Blair?" Between each sentence she directed Higgins, who was getting her into her bodice. "And how do you like 'Mandelay'?" "Isn't it great?" She addressed herself to Dan, but she smiled on both the men with extreme brilliance.

"You bet your life," he responded. "I should think it was great!" Pontotowsky rose indolently. He had not looked toward the newcomer, but had, on the other hand, followed every detail of Miss Lane's dressing.

"Better take your scarf, Letty. Hand it to Miss Lane," he directed Higgins. "It is so damned drafty in these booby wings."

He drew his watch out, gathered up his long coat, flung it over his arm and picked up his opera hat which lay folded on Letty Lane's dressing table.

The call page for the third time summoned "Miss Lane—no, Miss Lane—no," and she took the scarf Higgins handed her and ran it through her hands, still beaming on Dan.

"Come in to see me at the Savoy on any day, at two-thirty except on mat-

CHAPTER V.
At the Carlton.

There are certain natures to whom each appearance of evil, each form of delinquency is a fresh surprise. They are born simple, in the sweet sense of the word, and they go down to old age never of the world, although in a sense worldly. If Dan Blair's eyes were somewhat opened at twenty-two, he had yet the bloom on his soul. He was no fool, but his ideals stood up each on its pedestal and ready to appear one by one to him as the scenes of his life shifted and the different curtains rose. He had been trained in finance from his boyhood and he was a born financier. Money was his natural element; he could go far in

"She Knows How to Make Herself Conspicuous," Said the Duchess.

It. But woman! He was one of those many creatures—a knight—to whom each woman is a sacred thing; a dove, a crystal-clear soul, made to be cherished and to protect, made to be spoiled. And in Dan were all the qualities that go to make up the unselfish, tender, foolish, and often unhappy American husband. These were some of the other things he had inherited from his father. Blair, senior, had married his first love, and where his boy had been trained to know money and its value, how to keep it and spend it, to save it and to make it, he had been taught nothing at all about woman. He had never been taught to distrust women, never been warned against them; he had been taught nothing but his father's worship of his mother, and the result was that he worshipped the sex and wondered at the mystery.

With Gordon Galorey and the others he had ridden, shot better than they, and had played, but with Lady Galorey and the Duchess of Breakwater he was nothing but a child. As far as his hostess was concerned, on several occasions she had put to him certain states of affairs, well, touchingly. Dan had been moved by the stories of sore need among the tenants, had been impressed by the necessity of reforms and rebuildings and on each occasion had given his hostess a check. She had asked him to say nothing about it to Gordon, and he had kept his silence. Dan liked Lady Galorey extremely; she was jolly, witty and friendly. She treated him as a member of the family and made no demands on him, save the ones mentioned.

In the time that he had come to know the Duchess of Breakwater she, on her part, had filled him full of other confidences. Into his young ears she poured the story of her disappointment, her disjointed life, from her worldly girlhood to her disillusion in marriage. She was beautiful when she talked and more lovely when she wept. Dan thought himself in love with the Duchess of Breakwater. His conversations with her had brought him to this conclusion. They had material from Oudene Park together, and he had been extremely taken with the pleasure of it, and with the fact of their real companionship. Two or three times the words had been on his lips, which were fated not to be spoken then, however, and Dan reached the Gaiety still unfettered, his duchess by his side. And then the orchestra had begun to play "Mandelay," the curtain had gone up and Letty Lane had come out on the boards. But her apparition did not strike off his chains immediately, nor did he renounce his plan to tell the duchess the very next day that he loved her.

When with sparkling eyes Lady Galorey raved about "Mandelay," Dan listened with eagerness. Everybody seemed to know all about Letty Lane, but he alone knew from what town she had come!

They went for supper at the Carlton after the theater.

"Letty," Lady Galorey said, "tells it herself how the impresario heard her sing in some country church—picked her up then and there and brought her over here, and they say she married him."

Dan Blair could have told them how she had sung in that little church that day. Dan was eating his caviare sandwich. "Her name then was Sally Towney," he murmured. How little he had guessed that she was slung herself right out of that church and into the London Gaiety Theater! Anyway, she had made him "sit up!" It was a far cry from Blaintown to the London Gaiety. And so she married the greasy Jew who had discovered her!

Dan glanced over at the Duchess of Breakwater. She was looking well, exultantly high bred, and she impressed him. She leaned slightly over to him, laughing. He had hardly dared to meet her eyes that day, fearing that she might read his secret. She had told him that in her own right she was a countess—the Countess of Stainer. Titles didn't cut any ice with him. At any rate, she would be able to "buy back the old farm"—that is the way Dan put it. She had told him of the beautiful old Stainer Court, mortgaged and hung up with debts, as deep in ruins as the ivy was thick on the walls.

As Dan looked over at the duchess he saw the other people staring and looking about at a table near. It was spread a little to their left for four people, a great bouquet of orchids in the center.

"There," Galorey said, "there's Letty Lane." And the singer came in, followed by three men, the first of them the Prince Pontotowsky, indolent, bored, haughty, his eyes-glasses dangling. Miss Lane was dressed in black, a superb costume of faultless cut, and it enveloped her like a shadow; as a shadow might unfold a specter, for the dancer was as pale as the dead. She had neither painted nor rouged, she had evidently employed no coquetry to disguise her face; rather she seemed to be on the verge of a serious illness, and presented a striking contrast to the brilliant creature, who had shone before their eyes not an hour before. Her dress was a challenge to the more gay and delicate affairs the other women in the restaurant wore. The gown came severely up to her chin. Its high collar closed around with a pearl necklace; from her ears fell pearls, long, creamy and priceless. She wore a great feathered hat, which, drooping, almost hid her small, pale face and her golden hair. She drew off her gloves as she came in and her white, jeweled hands flashed. She looked infinitely tired and extremely bored. As soon as she took her seat at the table intended for her party, Pontotowsky poured her out a glass of champagne, which she drank off as though it were water.

Not one of these women ever received compensation in any form for the use of their names in this advertisement—but are willing that we should refer to them because of the good they may do other suffering women to prove that Lydia E. BETTER FORM SHOWN BY VARSITY ELEVEN

First Practice With Freshmen Has Revealed Most Promising Team in Years.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)
Madison, Wis., Oct. 5.—The first freshman-varsity practice game of the season revealed what the coaches had promised—a snappier, faster and better varsity team than recent years have brought forth at Madison. The score was in the neighborhood of 14 to 0 and was made by two touchdowns, a drop kick and a kick. The second half, particularly, went off with brilliancy that kept all concerned on edge and raised popular optimism here another notch. Freshman Berger, a halfback, made a name for himself for general cleverness and ability to stand the game. Individual brilliance on the varsity was not particularly manifest but today's practice is expected to give a better clue on several players.

WAS THE FRIEND OF A KING

Merchant Told of the Strong Attachment of King Edward for John Bright.
An interesting account is given for the first time of an incident which began the friendship that existed between John Bright and King Edward VII. The story was told by Mr. Bright in the hearing of Mr. Connaught, a merchant in Manchester. Mr. Bright, it seems, had, at a meeting in St. James' hall, rebuked those people who were criticizing Queen Victoria for her rare appearances at public functions after the passing away of the prince consort. On the following morning the private secretary of King Edward (then Prince of Wales) called upon Mr. Bright with a special request from the prince to call upon him at Marlborough house. Mr. Bright at first demurred, but yielding to the pleading of the messenger, he went, and he was received in the most friendly manner by the prince and introduced to the family circle. The prince took Mr. Bright aside and as a son thanked him for his kindly words on behalf of the mourning queen, and asked to be granted the privilege of being counted among the tribune's friends. "Whatever may be my personal opinion of kings and princes," Bright said, concluding his narration of the incident, "the man before me was a son making an appeal on behalf of his mother, and I could not resist it. We shook hands, and have been close friends ever since."—Christian Science Monitor.

Small Robert did not know the meaning of death, so when he was told that a man across the street was dead he asked his five-year-old sister what it meant to be dead. After a moment's hesitation she answered: "Why, to be dead means that—that you are all in."

Acorns Are Made Entirely of New Iron Why Not Be Comfortable This Winter? Make a Sure Thing of It With a Royal Acorn Base Burner

The Stove That Pays For Itself

The Royal Acorn pays for itself in the coal it saves. It saves coal because all the heat is radiated into the room instead of passing up the chimney. The Royal Acorn will do as much heating with one ton of coal as an ordinary stove with two tons, because no coal is wasted. When you burn a pound of coal you get a certain amount of heat, but if the stove is not tight, or the flue construction is wrong, a large portion of the heat goes up the chimney. At the present price of coal, enough fuel is wasted in the ordinary base burner to cover the difference in the first cost between the ordinary stove and a Royal Acorn. The Circular Flue System of the Royal Acorn has been proved beyond doubt to be the most efficient flue construction known—it throws out the heat and will warm the largest possible amount of space with a given amount of coal. The Royal Acorn is a stove that can be shut up tight in mild weather to hold fire for days without attention. This is due to the excellent joints and to the machine fitted ashpit door and damper. It has a grate that clears out ashes and clinkers without wasting any live fire or unburned coal. The nickel parts are put on without bolts, making it a very easy stove to set up and take down. Acorn Stoves have been "America's Very Best" since 1830. This particular pattern, the Royal Acorn, was brought out five years ago as THE PERFECT BASE BURNER. Thousands are in use but no single defect in construction, workmanship or operation has been discovered. The Royal Acorn is a perfect stove—it is fully guaranteed. It costs only a trifle more than an ordinary stove. It pays for itself in the fuel it saves.
